INTRODUCTION

The importance of bioethics has never been as pressing as nowadays when more specialized science and technology have been developed, and may at some point, without adequate ethical provision, potentially cause disadvantages, harm and even jeopardize human lives.

Bioethics with its inherently embedded trans-disciplinary concept, puts emphasis on rationality, comprehensiveness, and open-mindedness in analyzing issues surrounding science and technology development. Therefore, in order to achieve harmony and preserve humanities, it is imperative to infuse and cultivate bioethics values throughout all forms of civic and professional education, at all levels.

Two major bioethics events, , the 8th National Meeting of JBHKI an the 17th Asian Bioethics Conference, will be held simultaneously in Jogjakarta, Indonesia. With the spirit of transdisciplinary teamwork, tolerance for diversity, caring for humanity, and dialogues for conflict resolution, these joint events are expected to facilitate and motivate bioethics development as well as integration in many aspects of human lives, both at national and global level.

PARTICIPANTS

We are inviting both domestic and international participants to attend and participate in either or both successive events. Participants are expected to come from various areas of expertise and backgrounds, with interest in Bioethics and Humanities, including but not limited to health professionals, scientists, researchers, academicians, NGOs, environmentalists, peacemakers, country/institution representatives, government officers, students, and community members.
