

BunRong Kouy is a Chinese-Cambodian. She has grown up in a dual culture environment. Born in a business family in Phnom Penh, the capital city of Cambodia, she has been educated in a trilingual language education (Chinese, English and Khmer).

She graduated from Institute of Foreign Languages, Royal University of Phnom Penh. She received her Bachelor degree in Education in 2011. Currently, she is an English teacher at Australian Center for Education. She is going to pursue her master degree in Bioethics related program at National Central University at Taiwan, ROC in this upcoming September.

BunRong is one of first generation of Youth Peace Ambassadors. She has attended five out of six YPA workshops (except the third one in Malaysia). She is also one of the founders of Cambodia Youth Peace Ambassadors, a youth-led club working on promoting peace culture, peace education and peace awareness in her own community. She has successfully implemented and assisted her fellow trainees on a number of action plans including Educational Peace Fair, Peace with Nature, Informal Teaching on Peace, History and Genocide as well as several workshops focused on the theme of peace.

Her latest action plans are “Free Hugs for Peace” (YPA4) and “Ride for Peace” (YPA5). She believes that peace can be achieved in no relation to capital.

In addition to YPA, BunRong has involved in a number of peace, youth empowerment and bioethics international forums and events in Philippines, New Zealand, South Korea, Laos, Thailand, Malaysia and Taiwan, ROC. She is also one of the founders of an annual-based project called “Youth Emerge”.
