I am a Chinese student studying in St. Paul University, Quezon City, Philippines. My major is English. I attended my first Youth Looking Beyond Disaster (LBD10) conference in Istanbul, Turkey. When I was in Chinese school, I used to be a member of the network publicity department of the Youth Volunteers Association, responsible for compiling and publishing volunteer news of our school on social media.

As my interests, I like classical music, reading books and badminton. My hobbies are playing the piano, writing Chinese calligraphy, doing tai chi occasionally and practicing Yoga. Besides, I also like travel, it can help me learn a lot of things during its process.

My purpose is to learn knowledge from this activity and help me get some experiences which can help me to be a good teacher in the future. As an education major student, I can obtain new information and get some new ways for analyzing things which can be got from this international stage. Of course, I also hope that I can contribute to global issues, and strive towards the goal of “universal love”.
