Last August 2010, the storm Ondoy came in the Philippines, particularly in the area of Manila and flood was so high that it killed a lot of people. Her family was one of the victims, although they were still safe and just waited for the flood to subside for days. Last August 2013, a scenario like this happened again. These natural disasters, and partly human-made disasters, caused a lot of damage to infrastructures and humans. Through this, she has become more willing to help other people and is willing to give any help she could.
