

Humans and Nature: Love and Hate?

World Views of Nature Workshop

Date: 9th November, 2013, 10 am – 3pm

Norwood Hall, Norwood Green Rd Southall, UB2 4LA

Come and join participants from around the world, different ages, ethnicities and faiths. The World Views of Nature project explores commonalities and differences between ethical and value systems, and poses the question whether the pursuit of universal environmental values promoted at the United Nations is realistically workable. With our failure to meet the millennium development goals (MDGs) now looming over us and little progress made in halting climate change on a global scale, we will be examining whether a different approach to bringing about environmental consciousness and real action might be preferable as the global environmental crisis is arguably deepening. The workshop is part of series of international conferences and workshops held across Asia, Africa and the Americas. The day will open spaces for dialogue and feature a series of talks exploring the role environmental ethics can play in influencing environmental policy, as well as examining different environmental ethics from across the world. NGOs can also display their materials and work.

This event is sponsored by Sri Guru Singh Sabha, Havelock Road, Southall, London. This is a project coordinated by The Sikh Human Rights Group in cooperation with Eubios Ethics Institute (New Zealand, Japan and Thailand) and American University of Sovereign Nations (USA). There will also be a 30 minute Sitar recital during the day. See map.

Lunch will be provided for all guests and participants and there is no fee.

If you would like to come it will be helpful to email to: Mr. Amit Singh (Email: admin@shrg.net) or Call 07969387974, so we can circulate the agenda with you, and prepare our catering.
